, ENTOMBED A WEEK, MINERS ARE SAVED

Nine Men and Boys Rescued Given Up for Them.

TAMAQUA. Pa., Oct. 4.—Nine man and boys, who had been entombed in the Foster tunnels of the Lehigh Coal and Navigation Company since last Monday, have been rescued alive, and today are recovering from the effects of their experience.

Fully 5,000 persons lined the ropes, 10 feet from the tunnel's mouth, yesterday, when a miner came out and whispered when a miner came out and whispered to Sheriff Hortneady that the men had been reached and were all alive. The news spread quickly throughout the big assemblage, but not sound was heard. The crowd stood as if spellbound. The unexpected had occurred, and the men had been reached alive after they had been given up as dead.

John McAndrews and Joseph Murphy were the first two to reach the surface at 4:10. Then followed Elmer Harron and John Boner. Herron was in good condition and wanted to walk, and also seked for a cigar, stating that he had not had a smoke for a week, but both requests were refused.

Rescence Called Marvelous.

Rescue Called Marvelous.

Then, in order, came Peter Lemmock, Charles Matokis, Dominick Holchek, Joe Lagoinis and Dominic Dodori. All men raised their heads from the stretchers, as though to tell their waiting relatives and friends that they waiting relatives and friends that they were 'out of the valley of the shadow.'
The rescue is considered one of the most marvelous in the history of mining. It was the general opinion that while some of the men might have reached the breast, others of the employes working in the gangway would be swept away by the flood. Leading mineworkers were optimistic until yesterday, when the announcement came that black damp had ben discovered. Then they relinquished all hopes, feeling that if the men had escaped the flood they would have been overcome by the gas.

flood they would have been overcome by the gas.

Several of the men, apparently of strong constitution and vitality, taked cheerfully to their stretcher bearers while being taken from the mine, and from this source it was learned that fish oil and a few crushed chicken bones had made up the principal diet of the men until Thursday, on which day the later delicacy had been devoured, and the fish oil composition was the only item on the bill of fare.

Mime Saves Dinner Pail. Each of the men entombed had in his pockets several cakes of a fish oil substance known as "sunshine cakes," a form of paraffin that is used by mine workers in lamps, and which gives a smokeless flame. One of the entombed men John Bon-er, has for many years held a reputa-

One of the entombed men. John Bonef, has for many years held a reputation for his enormous appeite and the size of the dinner puil that is required to contain his midday meal. Having just taken his pail in his hand shortly before noon Monday, when the rush of water forced in the roof, Boner according to the story of his companions, ran with others to chute No. 27, but still kept a firm grip on the dinner pail.
Hours later, when the first pangs of hunger assailed the entombed men, Boner extracted from the pail many pieces of bread, other articles of food found in most miners' cans, and, above all, the greater portion of a roast chicken. All of the food was shared among the men, but the chicken was saved until the last. Not knowing how long they would be held prisoners, the men partook of their food in small quantities, and, after carefully taking off all the meat from the bones, placed the latter back in the dinner pail for a reserve supply.

Cakes of the oil were also carefully off all the meat from the bones, placed the latter back in the dinner pail for a reserve supply. Cakes of the oil were also carefully hearded and the men chewed on them for hours, extracting what little nour-ishment they contained. The paraffin cakes, however, served to moisten the men's throats. More than forty-eight hours before their rescue, as nearly as the men could determine the time, the reserve supply of chicken bones was passed around, and these, according to the men who could talk, were ground between their teeth and partaken of in small quantities. For the last two days, however, the men declared they had been without food and care was exercised at the hosnital in giving nourishment. They were compelled to drink the mine water, which they did in sparing quantities.
